Identifiers flagged in the text of the claims that Rule 9037 says must not appear (notify the clerk)

This check reads a PDF's text in your browser. It can miss an identifier in a picture, a scan, a form field, a comment, an attached file, an earlier version kept in the file, an unusual font, or digits set apart by spaces or split into boxes, so it never clears a document.

- Claim 2-1, page 5: Payment-card number ending 1111
- Claim 6-1, page 4: Account number ending 7731

Possible identifiers to look at

Nothing was flagged in the text this check could read.

Pages read

- Claim 4-1 (sample-association-lien-claim.pdf): text read, nothing else seen on 5 of 5 pages.
- Claim 2-1 (sample-card-debt-claim.pdf): text read, nothing else seen on 5 of 5 pages.
- Claim 6-1 (sample-home-loan-claim.pdf): text read, nothing else seen on 4 of 4 pages.

Not read

Nothing is listed as not read, but this check can miss what it does not see: look at every page yourself.

A page is listed as read when its text was searched and this check saw nothing else on it; that does not mean nothing else is there. A picture it sees (a scan, a photo, a signature, a logo, a stamp, digits drawn as shapes, or text in a font whose characters it could not check) is listed as not read until OCR reads it, and a page read by OCR still needs a look at the image, since OCR can misread a number. A font can also give the wrong characters for what the page shows without this check noticing. An image covered by a box drawn over it, made invisible, clipped away or outside the page's visible area is listed as not read; an image covered by another image is not seen. Comments, form fields, the document's properties and bookmarks are searched. An attached file is searched only when it is plain text (UTF-8, or UTF-16 with a byte-order mark); other attached files are listed as not read. An earlier version kept in the file is compared with the pages only by its page text and its number of pictures, so it is listed as not compared in full.

This memo covers only the claims listed above, as filed when they were dropped in. Claims filed later (a governmental unit's claim, an amended or a late claim) are not in it: run the review again after each bar date and after any new claim.

Card or revolving account: the writing comes on request

For open-end consumer credit the creditor files the statement in Rule 3001(c)(4)(A) instead of attaching the writing. On a party in interest's written request, the creditor must send a copy of the writing within 30 days after the request is sent.

Note

Claim was bought from another creditor

Northwind Recovery LLC names Example Bank, N.A. as the earlier holder. No rule requires a transfer document with a claim bought before it was filed. For card or revolving debt the open-end statement must name the seller. If standing is in doubt, ask for the chain of title.

Claim rests on a writing but no copy was found

A Rule 3001(c) gap: the claim may not be entitled to the presumption of validity Rule 3001(f) gives a claim filed by the rules, and the court may bar the missing information as evidence or award fees (Rule 3001(c)(3)).
